The German authorities have kept the accident a secret.—Reuter.

BERLIN DENIAL

Berlin, June 16.
An official of the Air Ministry today denied the Copenhagen report of the loss of a German seaplane in the Skagerrak.—Reuter.

SKAGEN REPORTS

London, June 17.
Despite official denials in Berlin, Danish sources adhere to the report that a German naval seaplane crashed in the sea during the naval manoeuvres in the Skagerrak, all seven occupants being killed.
A Copenhagen message states that people in the neighbourhood of the fishing town of Skagen say they saw torpedo-bombs picking up the wrecked seaplane. All flags on German vessels were, the message states, half-masted for a short time.—Reuter.

BRAVES TROUNCE LEADERS HEAVY HITTING IN AMERICAN LEAGUE YANKEES ARE HUMBLED

New York, June 16.
Boston Braves trounced the National League leaders, St. Louis Cardinals, by ten to four today.
The Braves pounded out seventeen hits and the Cardinals' pitchers wilted under the assault. St. Louis replied with nine hits and committed two errors in the field. Boston had one.
Pittsburgh recovered itself and beat Brooklyn nine to two, hitting twelve times to five and only committing one error.
New York defeated Cincinnati five to two, on eight hits to seven, and profited largely from the Reds' four errors. Glantz had two errors.
Chicago kept pace and place by trouncing the Phillies four to one, securing thirteen hits to ten. Each team had one error.

FOXX HITS FAIR

Fox hit a pair of homers for Boston, but there was no one on the bases at the time and they were the only tallies his team achieved. The Red Sox consequently lost to Chicago, which scored four off nine hits. There were no errors.
Home runs failed to lift the Yankees out of the hole, and the League leaders collapsed before the slugging Indians. Cleveland scored eight runs on thirteen hits and New York four on ten. Dickey hit one homer for the Yankees and Gehrig hit two more.
There was more heavy hitting when Philadelphia met St. Louis. Higgins and Hayes both driving the ball out of the park and contributing the team score of thirteen hits and nine runs. St. Louis scored four on six hits. Athletics had two and Browns one error.
Washington's Stone and Reynolds hit homers and helped nose out Detroit, nine to eight. Rogell homered for the champions. Senators had ten and Tigers twelve hits, and the errors went one and two, respectively.—Reuter.

The British Delegation will leave for Switzerland on Saturday. It will include representatives of the Army, Navy and Air Force as well as Foreign Office experts. The Conference opens on Monday.—British Wireless.

STRIKE GAINS MOMENTUM GRAVE SITUATION IN BELGIUM

POLICE WIELD SABRES CHARGING CROWD

Brussels, June 16.
The strike situation is growing worse, particularly in Liege district, where the public services are affected.
The Liege trams were stopped under threat of being burned.

Police made sabre charges to disperse crowds outside the public offices.

Armed gendarmes have occupied the centre of the town in force.

Miners and metal workers in Hainault, Liege and Flanders are swelling the ranks of the strikers hourly.

The dock-workers at Ghent threaten to cease work tonight.—Reuter Bulletin Service

Troops Called

Brussels, June 16.
Troops have been called out to ensure the maintenance of essential utilities, following the strike of public service employees in Brussels, Liege and Seraing. The troops immediately replaced the strikers.—United Press.

Frayed Tempers

The country is still calm but there are indications of frayed tempers in some strike areas.
Communists are reported active in Charleroi district.

Following visits of strikers to each plant in turn, most of the works in Belgium's "black country," La Louviere and La Croix, have been closed during the day. The engineering shops, steel works, rolling mills, glass and pottery factories, and wagon works which export largely to America, China and England, all have been closed down.
No disorders have yet been reported, except in Brussels, but additional gendarmes have been sent to the troubled district. They are mostly reservists, armed with carbines, khaki and with red bands on their forearms, which they wear as regular soldiers who have not been used to now in the dispute.—Reuter.

Situation Normal

Paris, June 16.
The situation in France is now normal, although there are still 76,000 persons on strike in Paris.
However, it is estimated that 200,000 returned to work yesterday.—Reuter's Bulletin Service.

LOCAL SOLICITOR PASSES

DEATH OF MR. C. BULMER JOHNSON

An eminent member of the local legal fraternity in the person of Mr. Charles Bulmer Johnson, of Messrs. Hastings and Company, Marina House, passed away at the War Memorial Nursing Home last night after a brief attack of acute dysentery. He had been in hospital since Friday.
The late Mr. Johnson, who was in his 53rd year, hailed from Teddington, Middlesex, and arrived in the Colony in 1906. On October 7, in the following year, he was admitted to the practice as a solicitor in the Supreme Court. In 1917 Mr. Johnson went on war service and was stationed in Kirkee, near Poona, India.
When he first arrived in Hongkong, Mr. Johnson joined the firm of Messrs. Dennys and Bowley, Mr. Dennys being his uncle. The firm then amalgamated and became Messrs. Hastings, Dennys and Bowley and when Mr. Dennys left the firm it became Hastings and Company, with Mr. Edgar Davidson and Mr. E. S. G. Brooks as partners of Mr. Johnson.

FORMER SPORTSMAN

In his younger days Mr. Johnson was a playing member of the famous Teddington, Middlesex hockey team, which boasted no less than 15 internationalists at one time. In his earlier days in Hongkong, he played for the Hongkong Hockey Club where he (Continued on Page 4)

MISSING TRAWLER WRECKED

LLOYDS' REPORTS INDICATE ON TREASURE HUNT

London, June 16.
The Grimsby trawler, Girl Pat, missing since April 3 and subsequently turned up at Dakar, only to vanish again into the South Atlantic, may be wrecked.

A Lloyd's message from Inagua, Bahamas, states that a native fishing vessel reports that a small British vessel was found wrecked on eastern Sannam Bay and that there were three dead aboard.
It may be the Girl Pat and her small crew of adventurers.
The Girl Pat was on a mysterious voyage, presumably after treasure. Her owners did not know the intentions of the master of the trawler when he left Grimsby over two months ago, but from hints dropped after his run-away and in out-of-the-way ports, it was presumed that he was on a treasure-hunt, though his destination was not known.
The Girl Pat was a motor trawler and about two weeks ago was sighted by an American steamer, flying distress signals. When the American hailed the little ship and asked her name, for it had been painted out, the master suddenly hauled down his signal flags and put about, making all speed away from the craft which was offering assistance.—Reuter.

GREAT CRATER FOUND IN OCEAN'S FLOOR

London, June 16.
A remarkable "fault" discovered in the bed of the ocean off the South African coast has aroused the interest of geologists.

A Durban message reports that the Union Castle liner, Athlone Castle, on her maiden voyage, ran over a tremendous hole in the ocean floor off the coast of Natal. The hole was revealed to the astonished navigator working the electric sounding device, and was so deep that the recording needle ran off the paper on which the echo-sounder registers depths. In the centre of the hole is a gigantic pinnacle of rock.
The Athlone Castle's find confirms discoveries made by the Royal re-

CONDITIONS
PERFECT
(Special to "Telegraph")
London, June 16.
Blue skies smiled over Royal Ascot and the fashionably dressed and grey-topped crowd never looked lovelier. Trainers are delighted with the perfect condition of the course.

Book-makers had a delightful day, three twenty to one outsiders winning and only one hot favourite coming home first. This was the American-owned and bred Nightingale, Mr. J. H. Whitely's entry, the Queen Mary Stakes, which started at four to one.

The meet's hottest favourite, the Aga Khan's Derby winner Mahmoud, starting an odds on bet at eight to eleven, was trounced by five lengths in the St. James Palace Stakes, one mile, by Lord Astor's Scholar, at two to one, who had seven pounds advantage.

Lord Astor had another victory in the Coventry Stakes with Early School, at eleven to four, the second favourite. Trainers were Sir Abe Bailey's Valerian, 20/1, in the Prince of Wales Stakes, Major J. B. Walker's Boulder, 21/1 in the Ascut Stakes, and the Aga Khan's Hindoo Holiday, 9/1, in the Queen Anne Stakes.—Reuter Special.

PASSED BY HOUSE
BY WIDE MARGIN
Washington, June 16.
The substitute Guffey Coal Industry Bill, from which the sections to which the Supreme Court objected have been deleted, passed the House by a vote of 161 to 90.

The House also passed an amendment limiting the life of the Bill to two years. The Bill has now been sent to the Senate.—Reuter.

Backs League To Last S. AFRICA CONTINUES SANCTIONS

Capetown, June 16.

"We have no right to be unfaithful to the League of Nations merely because we fear that others are going to be untrue to it," declared General James Hertzog, Prime Minister of South Africa, addressing the Assembly to-day.

"If other nations, like Great Britain and France, are not prepared to face the possible outcome of continuing sanctions, that will not affect South Africa, which intends to support the League of Nations to the last," the veteran statesman declared.

If the League failed through the failure of its members to honour their obligations there would be a world war within twenty years, warned General Hertzog.—Reuter.

ALGERIAN CRISIS
Jerusalem, June 16.
Although several bombing and shooting incidents are reported from various points, Palestine passed a comparatively quiet night. There is a lull in the terrorist activity.

But this is not regarded as an indication that the situation has improved as similar lulls in the past have been followed by renewed outbreaks.—Reuter Bulletin Service.

MANY ARRESTS

Jerusalem, June 16.
Fifteen more Arab leaders and agitators, including a Moslem municipal councillor of Haifa, have been sent to the new concentration camp at Sarafand.

It is understood there is a movement afoot to divert funds collected by the Friends of Abyssinia Committee of Iraq and Egypt to the Palestinian Arab strikers.—Reuter.

OMINOUS TURN

Algiers, June 16.
The strike movement has taken an ominous turn in Algeria. Armed bands of Arabs are over-running the countryside forcing farm labourers to cease work on penalty of death.

Crops on many farms have been destroyed.
Police and armoured cars have been sent to the chief danger spots.
There have been many arrests.—Reuter.

OTTAWA PACT DISCUSSIONS FOR REVISION

London, June 16.
In a Parliamentary answer to-day, the President of the Board of Trade announced that preliminary discussions with a view to revision of the Ottawa Agreement with Canada would begin shortly.

The Association of British Chambers of Commerce, the Federation of British Industries and the National Union of Manufacturers, as well as bodies representing particular industries, had been invited to furnish observations to the Board of Trade.
Mr. Runciman added that the question of similar consultations with industry in connection with possible revision of the Ottawa Agreements with other parts of the Empire did not arise at present.—British Wireless.

Mad Elephant Kills Keeper Before Crowd

San Francisco, June 16.
Maddened by the unusually severe heat, a bull elephant of the Fleishacker Zoo today trampled its keeper to death.

In view of a crowd of scores, who were helpless to intervene, the trumpeting animal turned savagely on Ed. Brown, 47, who was trying to calm it. He was killed almost instantly.—United Press.

STORING BIG GOLD SUPPLIES

BANK OF ENGLAND'S PURCHASES
EXPANDS
London, June 16.
Interest has been aroused by today's Bank of England gold purchases, amounting to over £1,400,000, following yesterday's £1,200,000 transaction for the yellow metal which was the largest in London for the past three years.

These big acquisitions bring the Bank of England's total of gold purchases since the beginning of the year to over £11,500,000, but as the Bank pays the old rate of about 85 shillings per ounce, the actual market value of these purchases approximately nearer £16,000,000.

It is the generally accepted opinion that the Exchange Equalisation Fund is figuring as the chief seller, its object being to relieve its congested gold stocks, while the Bank's object is to build up its gold reserve against the expanding tendency of note circulation caused by foreign hoarding and the great demand for English bank notes.—Reuter.

TEN LOST AS FERRY SINKS PANIC CAUSE OF DISASTER

Budapest, June 16.
The death roll in yesterday's ferry disaster, first reported as eight, is now ten.

It appears that the merry-makers, returning from a fishing expedition, were thrown into a panic when the little vessel listed suddenly in a current of the Danube. They rushed to the side of the ferry highest from the water with the result that their weight capitalized it in their direction.—Reuter Special.

DRAWS £500,000 TO STADIUM

There is no doubt but that Joe Louis, the colourful, Detroit heavy-weight, is the big draw for the fight at Yankee Stadium tonight. His record, Schmeling, already £500,000 has been paid for seats in the huge open air arena.

FIGHTERS READY FOR GONG LOUIS-SCHMELING CLASH TO-NIGHT HUGE SALE OF SEATS

New York, June 16.
Already over £100,000 has been taken by the box offices for the Schmeling-Louis world's championship elimination fight here to-morrow night.

Despite the recent rains the weather report for the contest, which will be in the open air at the great Yankee Stadium, is favourable. Postponement of the ring classic is unlikely.
Both fighters ended their training to-day. Joe Louis, the Detroit negro, is very fit and more impressive than ever in his sparring and work-outs. Max Schmeling, former champion, has been taking heavy punishment from his sparring partners, one of whom opened up a cut over the German's eye recently. This has fortunately healed.

Louis is an odds-on favourite at one to four, and one to ten in the New York negro quarter, Harlem. But the Detroit brown man, for the first time in two years, has not predicted the round in which he will knock his opponent out. His previous predictions were always correct.
Louis has developed a new right uppercut and Schmeling a new left jab.

The usual pre-fight controversies have started. Schmeling's supporters accuse the negro of putting on extra tape under his gloves and request that they be taped in the ring.
Louis has replied: "I don't need extras to beat that man"—Reuter.

59 KILLED IN EXPLOSION

MUNITIONS PLANT DISASTER

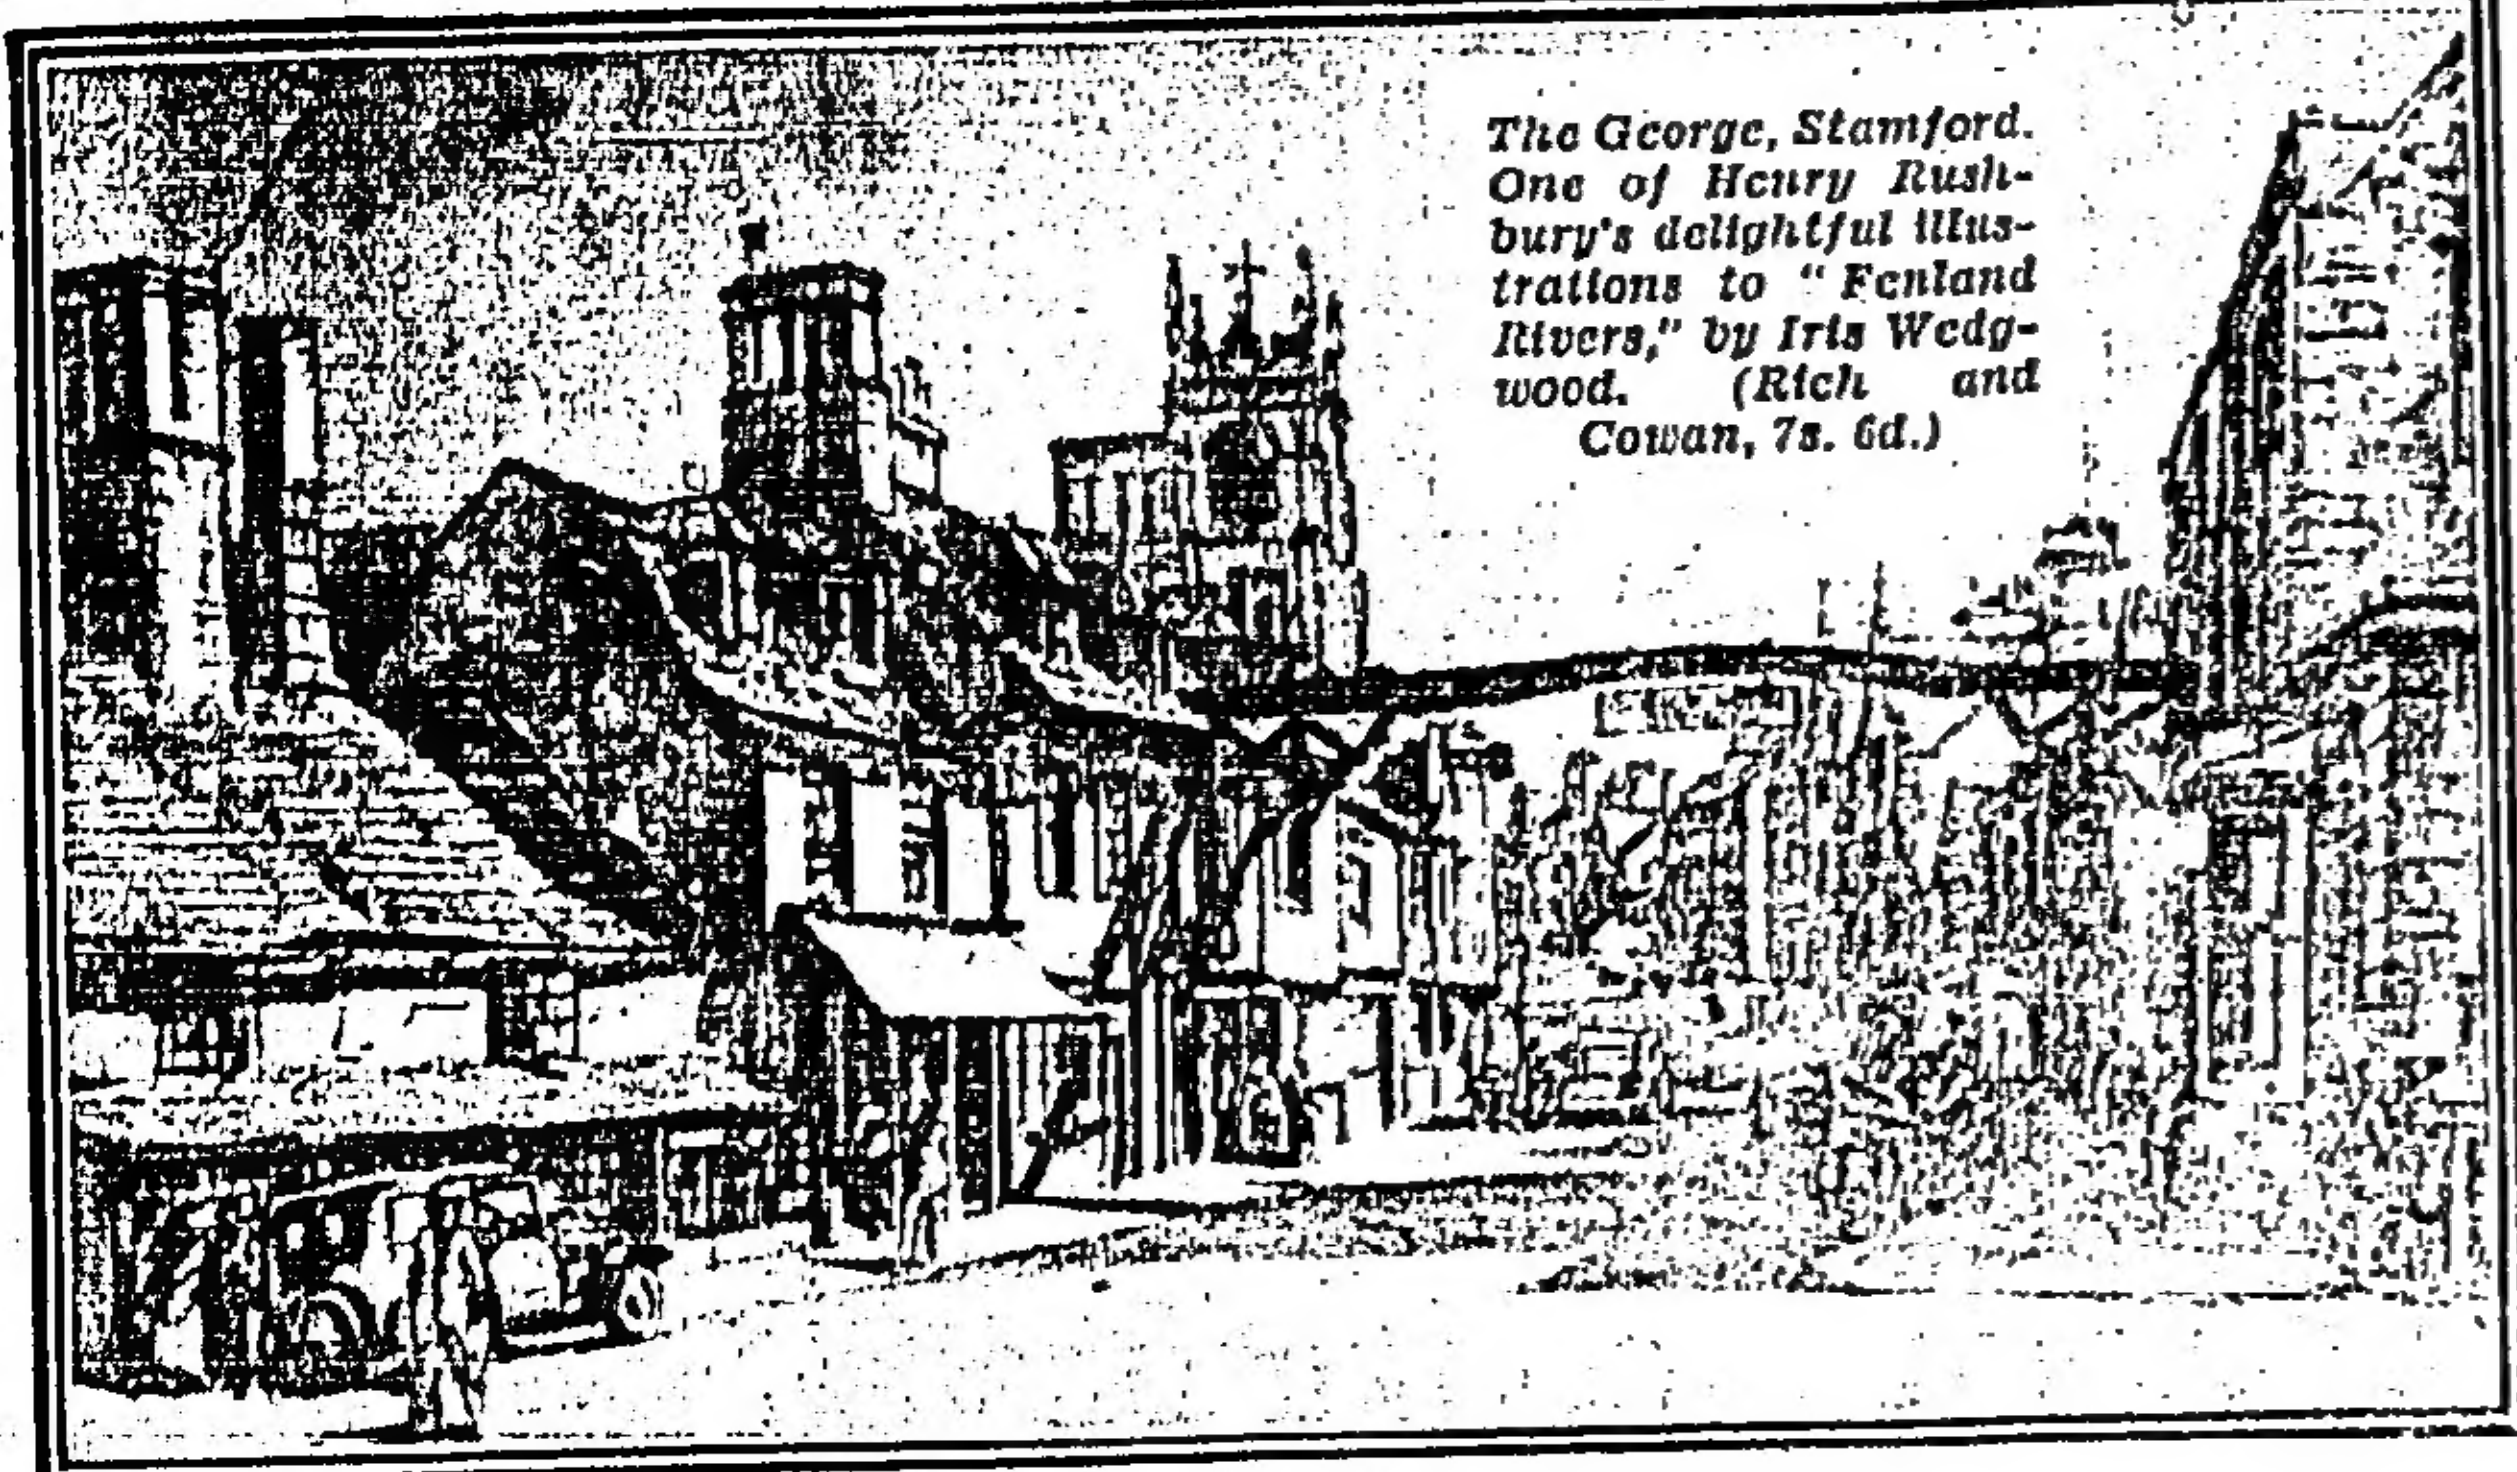

Tallinn, June 16.
Fifty-nine were killed and twenty-nine injured as the result of an explosion which wrecked part of a munitions factory here.
The explosion occurred whilst a shell was being charged.—Reuter Special.
A United Press message states that rescuers are endangered by the explosion of ammunition. They have removed sixty dead and twenty-seven injured, however.

ITALY ANNOUNCES IMPROVEMENTS

Rome, June 16.
The Italian Government will construct 2,300 miles of roads in Ethiopia at an estimated cost of £25,000,000, under a two-year plan approved to-day by Signor Benito Mussolini.
Plans have also been approved for the agricultural development of Italy's newly annexed colony, and include a scheme of colonisation through authorised bodies and a grant of small holdings, free of charge, to Italian peasants.—Reuter.

BOOKS OF THE WEEK... Edited by Roger Pippett

The George, Stamford. One of Henry Rushbury's delightful illustrations to "Fenland Rivers" by Iris Wedgwood. (Rich. and Cowan, 7s. 6d.)

SATIRE should be SWIFT

WE are not, as a people, very partial to satire. Nearly two hundred years ago Benjamin Franklin said, "Strange! That a man who has wit enough to write a satire should have folly enough to publish it." A remark which, I am afraid, would be echoed too often to-day.

But our complacency is being shaken, especially by those younger novelists who have discovered that the secret of successful satire is speed. The race is still to the Swifts. For that reason, among others, I welcome Maurice L. Richardson's "The Bad Companions" (John Miles, 7s. 6d.). It is that refreshing rarity—a novel which is funny, not to say farcical, and yet makes good sense. The pace, as well as the satire, is simply killing.

The author has planned his social attack on broad lines and carried it through with a breezy vigour that does not obscure the acid criticism of the shape of things to-day which is implicit in the story.

His two chief targets set out from prison on their astonishing adventures, playing the Old School Tie trick on the governor as they go. Before long they meet an amiable and harmless madman on parole. And, after tiding him up, buying him a top hat and bestowing a title on him, they proceed to the conquest of such fools and snobs as come their way.

It is, as you may imagine, a riotous pilgrimage, though the fun flags now and then towards the finish. The lunatic releases and has to return to detention. One rogue marries a wealthy widow and becomes temporarily respectable. A retired general takes over the Stuffed Shirts, those glorious rivals of the Fascists. And the last rogue, who invented the S.S., is destroyed by the monster which he created and retreats to jail once more.

I found it fast and furious going while it lasted. So long as there are folk to be flattered, folk with prejudices to exploit and illusions to foster, a rogue, it seems, can live.

You will certainly laugh over "The Bad Companions." But I fancy you will end it with the chastening reflection that, for all its extravagance, it is very nearly true. An exhilarating and salutary tale.

★ JAMES LAVER is also in satirical mood in "Fancie Among Puritans" (Heinemann, 7s. 6d.). But it is a lightweight affair compared to Mr.

Richardson's novel, and I thought it finally disappointing, despite the attraction of the theme.

Tired, presumably, of the everlasting boredom of life on Olympus, the gods and goddesses decide to "See England First." Nymphs are found sporting in rural streams, to the great discomfiture of the local police. Centaurs are seen galloping across the Yorkshire moors. Venus puts that diffident Londoner, Mr. Hargreaves, to the test of Olympian love and finds him sadly wanting. Jupiter frightens a mannequin. Bacchus causes a riot at an Albert Hall ball and is defeated by the closing hours. Only Mars is satisfied and decides to stay on.

And we leave Mr. Hargreaves wistfully foreseeing a time when "from the earth shall have faded the very memory of Bacchus and Silenus, of Venus and Apollo and Diana, of nymph and palad and satyr, of Saturn and of Jupiter himself, and the old gods shall return no more to trouble the imaginations of men."

I fear that Mr. Laver has missed a first-rate opportunity of troubling our imaginations. He might have borrowed a hint from Anatole France, who often stayed on Olympus, and taken an unconventional pick to the foundations of our manners and our mores. Instead of which, he has been content to make a too conventional attack on the conventions, and the significance of his fantasy is frivolously frittered away.

COMMEND Owen

Butler's new novel, "Water" (Michael Joseph, 7s. 6d.), to anyone who is still convinced that human nature can't be changed. It is a story of life in Borneo before the white man arrived to carry the black man's burden.

The social values and ideas of the people are poles apart from ours. But, once you realise that there is scarcely a conception of what is right and proper and righteous and necessary in one part of the world that can't be flatly contradicted in another, you will succumb to the fascination of this tale.

Mr. Butler has ingeniously subordinated his anthropological learning to his narrative skill. With the result that his book is definitely not a treatise on the head-hunters, but a fascinating account of the day-to-day existence of men and women under conditions which neither you nor I would long survive.

No attempt is made to judge the characters by our standards, nor to exhibit them as something out of a museum or a cage in the Zoo. They remain credible and memorable human beings.

SINCE Vicki Baum

sawing through the shining doors of Grand Hotel, many a novelist has followed her, dazed but pursuing.

But no one need trouble to imitate the plot of her new story, "Career" (Geoffrey Bles, 7s. 6d.), for it is as old as the earliest melodrama in which a genius struggled against poverty and destiny and the fell clutch of circumstance only to die in her lover's arms.

The author's vivacious touch still appears here and there, jangling the dusty wires and jerking the puppets out of their conventional capers. But puppets are puppets: they cannot escape their nature.

In short, they have given Frau Baum an unexpected holiday, and us her least interesting tale.

A NEW RACE TO CONQUER?

IT is growing increasingly difficult to find a spot on the earth where native races have not met white men. Which lends added interest to a fascinating book, "Papuania," by Jack Hilder (Blackie, 8s. 6d.), the story of a memorable Government expedition which the author led through unexplored country last year.

The discovery he made, and the bravery he showed, made him a national hero in Australia on his return.

For months Mr. Hilder and Patrol Officer O'Malley, "outside men" of the Papuan Service, assisted by a tiny band of hand-picked police and carriers, stumbled and tore their way through the hinterland of Papua, meeting tribes who had never before met white men.

Theory Upside

DYSENTERY thinned their ranks and crippled their marching powers. Starvation made it agony even to take a step. Limestone rocks made even for men with all their strength—and on each side of them lurked natives in the bush, with arrows in their bows, ready to shoot at the least excuse.

To me this is easily the finest travel book of the year. Its language is restrained and simple. It tells of amazing things.

They discovered a new people in the centre of the island, a tribe of "pretty, light-skinned men," intelligent and artistic, wearing wigs of human hair and using axes of stone.

"Whence they came," says Mr. Hilder, "is something that is not for me to answer. Upon my return to civilization, one anthropologist was openly annoyed at me for discovering such people. I think he had been writing a book, and my discovery had completely upset his theory."

I must be content with one quotation which shows the whole spirit of the expedition:

"I knew they would attack us if we tried to push through their territory. We made appeals to them, but always with the same response. Then I saw a tall, very thin and very black figure start to harangue the crowd. He was mounted on the shoulders of another native, to give him a higher command. I stopped and appeared to be urging the men to attack. The high priest was ordering death for the devils. Then he began beating a drum, at the same time moving his body with a backward and forward motion."

High Adventure

"EVERYTHING was very serious to them, but to us it was now an amusing situation, and O'Malley, unable to contain himself any longer, put two fingers to his mouth and whistled shrilly. The change was electric. The ceremony stopped and they stood still for a second. Then the crowd broke and scattered for the shelter of the bush."

"The high priest was dropped in a most undignified manner and must have been one of the first out of sight."

All who are interested in ethnology, in a true tale of high adventure told with a keen sense of humour, in the growth of an empire conducted by the peaceable means rather than by aerial torpedoes and gas bombs should read this book.

CARR JONES

Penniless London Ex-Soldier

COMES INTO SMALL FORTUNE

London, May 28.

A GOLDEN surplus has come to a penniless man who slept for years on a Thames Embankment seat.

Edward Merrell, aged forty-seven, was sitting reading in his niece's kitchen in Clerkenwell, London, when a solicitor knocked at the door.

He brought news that the Probate Court had admitted the once homeless man's claim to a small fortune left by a miser uncle, James Linkerson, ex-road-sweeper, of Islington.

Linkerson, who was sixty-nine years old, died in hospital after collapsing in the street. Search of his one-room home revealed a hoard of gold and notes worth nearly £2,000. Linkerson must have lived on about 1/3 a week during the latter years of his life.

Meanwhile, his nephew, Edward Merrell, ex-soldier, was penniless in London—unaware for months after his uncle's death that he had left all his wealth to him.

Six months ago Merrell was sleeping on a bench in St. James's Park when he was recognised as the long-sought claimant of the Islington miser's fortune.

Legal difficulties themselves; a woman entered a caveat in the High Court. The miser's fortune remained untouched.

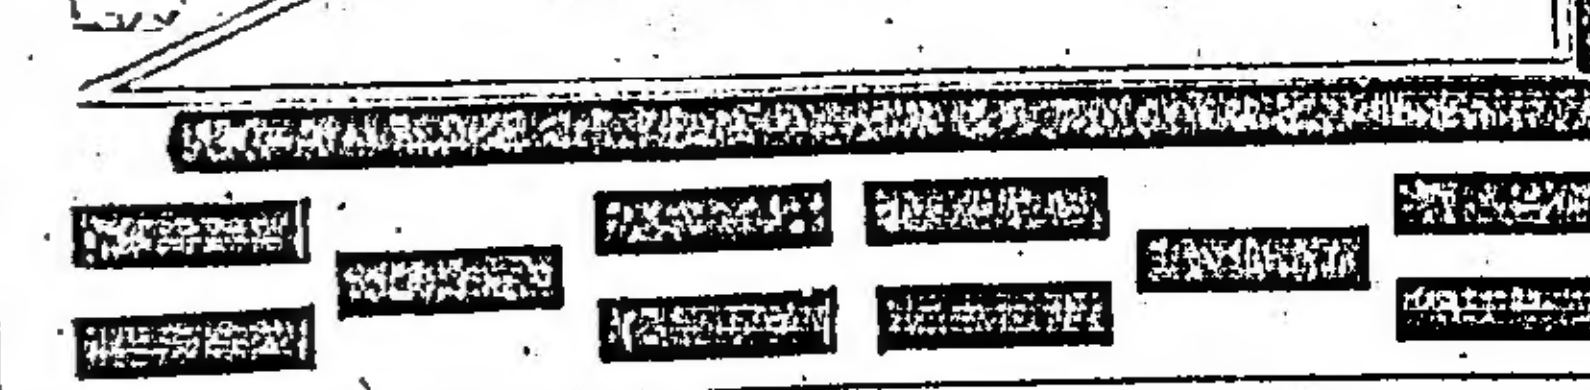

Then came dramatically into the will fight a man more than seventy years old. He swore that he saw old James Linkerson in his candle-lit room put his cross to the will form which left everything to the nephew he had not seen for years.

Mdivani
Princess
Re-marries

Tragedy That Ended In Romance

By ALYNE ALLWARD

PRINCESS NINA MDIVANI AND MR. DENIS CONAN DOYLE ARE TO BE MARRIED EARLY THIS SUMMER.

The Princess has filed a petition for divorce against her husband, Charles Henry Huberich, the international lawyer, whom she married at the Oxford Register Office 11 years ago.

When this has been completed she and Mr. Doyle are to marry and settle down in a quiet English country house.

When Prince Serge Mdivani was killed in a polo accident only six months after Prince Alexis was killed in a motor smash, Mr. Denis Doyle, an old school friend of the brothers, brought consolation and hope to the heart-broken Princess.

CONSOLATION AFTER TRAGEDY
Since the death of his father, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, Mr. Denis Doyle has been guided in all the major decisions of his life by messages from his father.

Princess Nina found great help and inspiration in her sorrow in Mr. Doyle's profound faith in his father's guidance.

A warm friendship developed, which was strengthened by her growing faith in Spiritualism. The Princess and Mr. Doyle found that their bond of understanding and sympathy was deeper than friendship.

They discussed the future, and decided that they would marry as soon as the Princess could obtain a divorce from her husband.

STILL GOOD FRIENDS

"My husband and I are very good friends, and we always shall be," Princess Nina told me, "but I love another man—that is the reason for the divorce."

"I would not describe myself as a Spiritualist, but I have found great consolation and help in Mr. Doyle's approach to these matters."

"The inner sincerity and peace which his faith has brought me are wonderful," she said.

Mr. Doyle has accepted his father's beliefs with passionate intensity, finding in them not only a satisfying philosophy but also a practical guide in everyday life.

The Cunard White Star Line has received a number of offers from shipbreakers for their 55,599-ton liner Majestic, now to be scrapped.

A decision will be made shortly. The price is expected to be about £110,000.

The thirty-three-year-old Union-Castle steamer Armadale Castle (12,999 tons), now laid up at Southampton, is about to be scrapped.

PUBLIC ENEMY ARRESTED IN GIRL'S DRESS

New York, May 30.

THE title American Public Enemy No. 1 has fallen into disuse again. Thomas H. Robinson, "bad man" who evaded capture by masquerading as a woman, was arrested early this morning, and so lost the "crown" which he had gained by the arrest in the past eleven days of Alvin Karpis, Harry Campbell, and William Mahan.

Robinson, hunted since October 1934 for the alleged kidnapping at Louisville, Kentucky, of socialite Mrs. Alice Speed Stoll, wife of oil magnate Berry Stoll, was captured because he loved to dress as a woman.

A short time ago, Lynn Allen, manager of a soda fountain bar at Glendale, California, reported to the famous G-men (Federal detectives) that a man dressed as a woman was patronising his counter.

"I'm sure this person is a man because he ate his sandwiches in quite an unattractive manner," said Allen.

G-men showed Allen a picture of Robinson which the barkeeper identified as the "woman."

NOT A "SOPRANO"
So several G-men took a long meal yesterday at Allen's fountain, and after a couple of hours dark-eyed black-haired Robinson walked in swishing his dresses.

He ordered a sandwich in a voice which was not at all like that of a lilying soprano.

Convinced of the masquerade the G-men followed him back to his apartment in the suburbs of Glendale.

Flinging open the door they pointed six guns at Robinson.

"All right?" queried one G-man sharply, cryptically.

"Sure it's all right," replied Robinson, slowly, putting up his hands.

But his raised hands trembled and his face was whiter than when it bore the powder of his disguise.

He made no move towards his gun.

Nearly £1,000 was found on Robinson.

Robinson, once an inmate of a lunatic asylum at Nashville, Tennessee, is alleged to have obtained £10,000 ransom from Mrs. Stoll.

He is being taken by air to Louisville to be confronted by her. It has been stated that if Robinson were caught the death penalty against him would be demanded.

EXPLOITS IN FILMS, WAR, CRIME

THE first and only Briton who journeyed to Abyssinia and offered his services to the Emperor at the start of the war was sent to prison for two years at the Old Bailey recently for shopbreaking and receiving stolen property.

As soldier of fortune and film actor—a man who has travelled the world ceaselessly for years in search of adventure—he has been known by the colourful, self-assumed name of "Texas Jack."

SLEEP IS EASY

Ignore The Sheep And Drink Olive Oil

Paris, June 1.

INSOMNIA can be cured without drugs or even the less harmful expedient of stuffing the ears with cotton wool.

Counting sheep is a waste of time.

All that is necessary to ensure restful sleep is for the sufferer to calm the nerves and muscles of the stomach with a tablespoonful of olive oil before bedtime.

Patients who have a distaste for olive oil should sniff menthol to clear the lungs and reduce the effort of breathing to a minimum.

These simple rules are laid down by a French scientist, M. Maurice Boigey, in a book just published, "The Science of Rest."

Married Her Business Rival

WOMAN AIR ACE

MRS. KEITH MILLER, air ace pioneer of long distance and record flights by women, was married at Epsom register office last month to Flight-Lieutenant John Barnard Walter Pugh, A.F.C.

Her age was given as thirty-four, his as thirty-five.

Mrs. Keith Miller was "grounded" by a crash in Africa which wrecked her machine.

She returned to London with little money, took work as a typist at Heston Airport, and became manager of a private firm there.

Flight-Lieutenant Pugh was her chief. Recently he became a business rival, joining a commercial air service as a chief pilot.

When Mrs. Miller flew from England to Australia ten years ago, her co-pilot was Captain W. ("Bill") Lancaster.

Later Captain Lancaster was acquitted by a Miami jury of a charge of murdering Mr. Hayden Clarke, fiancé of Mrs. Miller, in her Florida bungalow.

Mrs. Miller was principal witness in the trial.

She returned to Britain, and when Captain Lancaster vanished in Sahara on a Cape flight she appealed for money for a rescue attempt.

The airman was never found. He left his £170 estate to Mrs. Miller.

MAYORESS WHO COOKS THE MEALS

BLACKPOOL, JUNE 1.
A MAYORESS WILL COOK THE MEALS OF MANY VISITORS TO THIS RESORT THIS SEASON.

Miss Theodora Newman, who is the daughter of Alderman Walter Newman, acts as Mayoress, and in addition to her Mayoral duties she carries on a private hotel on the North Promenade.

From Whit Sunday to the end of the illuminations she will accommodate 40 people daily.

Apart from opening sales of work and garden fetes and other functions which form the town's social life, she cooks, buys-in, does the book-keeping, and engages the staff.

As a convicted housebreaker he is known by his real name, Alexander Wardlaw. He is thirty-two years of age, a native of Dunfermline, and son of hard-working Scottish parents.

"Texas Jack" has crammed more adventure into his life than most men of his age.

He went to Abyssinia as a "one man Crusader," and although his offer to fight with the Abyssinian troops was turned down, he journeyed to the war zone and witnessed a great deal of the fighting.

Wardlaw returned last December—and to crime.

Altogether the amount of stolen goods from raided mansion flats in the St. John's Wood area totalled £1,770 of which the police recovered £1,150.

"EXPERT RAIDER"

The conviction of "Texas Jack" ends a spectacular career in various parts of the world.

A man of powerful build, faultlessly groomed and immaculately dressed in a light grey Norfolk suit, "Texas Jack" heard unmoved Detective Sergeant A. McElduff's description of him as "an expert house-breaker."

According to the detective, "Texas Jack" specialised in selling the gems of stolen jewellery apart from their settings. At his rooms in North-West London the police discovered six pairs of new gloves.

The finger-tips and palms of these gloves were blackened, and this led the detectives to the belief that the gloves had been worn in scaling stackpiles of raided flats.

Mr. Lawrence Vine, who defended Wardlaw elicited the fact that the man enlisted in the Army during the war when he was only fifteen years old, and had served in the Black Watch and Dragoon Guards.

Three Scotland-yard men carried the stolen booty into court. It had been brought to the Old Bailey in a police tender. Arrayed on an oblong table in the well of the court, it resembled a small armory.

A costly sable fur coat, a radio set, cuff links, diamond rings—these were all the proceeds of raided flats and houses, all within a square-mile radius, and carried out within a month.

CRIME ABROAD

The crowded court of Judge Dodson listened enthralled as Detective Sergeant McElduff, of Vine-street, revealed "Texas Jack's" career.

He said Wardlaw had five previous convictions. In Bulawayo, Rhodesia, in April 1929 he was sent to twelve months' hard labour for six cases of housebreaking and theft and to another six months for jailbreaking.

In July 1931 at St. Albans he was sent to three months' hard labour for being found on enclosed premises.

Wardlaw was married in South Africa and divorced there in 1931.

He married a widow on his return to England, but she left him because he was always demanding money from her.

Wardlaw had been in Australia, America, and Africa. He was deported from Dar-es-Salaam (East Africa) in 1927. Before that he was employed for a time on the Kenya-Uganda Railway, and was discharged for insubordination.

Since his return to this country he had worked for various film companies. Wardlaw's last adventurous exploit was his trip to Abyssinia.

With a polite bow to the Judge "Texas Jack" went jauntily down the steps of the dock to the cells.

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE

MARKET UPWARD YESTERDAY

New York, June 16. Swan, Culbertson & Fritz Dow Jones summary of yesterday's market:—The market to-day was upward and prices advanced as much as two points. Steel stocks led the advance on reports of continued increased mill operations. Copper and utility securities were active and strong. J. I. Case shares were the most sensational performers, advancing 8½ to a new high level since 1930, due to increasing farm income. Mail-order shares, however, were only steady. Mercantile and motor issues extended their gains on prospects of Bonus payment buying. Oils were not so steady and barely held their own. Silver stocks were mixed. Railroad securities continued to respond to higher carloadings. Trading has accelerated and most issues closed at near the day's high mark. The market for bonds was higher. Stocks on the Curb Exchange were irregularly higher.

S. C. & F. New York office cables: Stocks: This market responded to a broader demand by bullish traders. The Firestone Tyre and Rubber Company earned 70 cents per share for the 6 months ended April 30, as against 40 cents the previous year. Business failures during the past week amounted to 172 as compared with 188 failures the previous week. Demand deposits totalled $14,677,000,000, against $14,580,000,000 the previous week.

Cotton: A continued broad trade demand, together with small offerings, imparted steadiness. Mills are buyers. The textile market is active and firm. It is reported that many orders are waiting to be executed at under the market price. There is apparently a broadening interest in commodities generally.

Wheat: The market is largely governed by weather conditions and we do not expect any material improvement for the present. Reports from the North-West incline some damage to the crop there.

Rubber: Interest is increasing, but the volume of business is small.

Swan, Culbertson & Fritz Wall Street Journal morning comment:—"The Summer railroad traffic outlook is the best since 1931. The textile situation is at present improving. Machine-tools are reported to be swamped with orders. Wall Street is optimistic enough regarding business and stock prices, but it wants volume. There is a small amount of investment buying. Some Wall Street authorities view the weakness of steel scrap prices as a warning of industrial recession in the next 60 days. Many traders expect a quiet and irregular market until the Tax Bill is concluded."

ACCIDENT SEQUEL
PORTUGUESE LADY'S CLAIM AT SUMMARY COURT

A motor accident which occurred on December 28 last had a sequel before Mr. Justice Williams at the Summary Court yesterday afternoon when Mrs. S. M. Santos, of 79 Wongneichong Road, claimed from Lee Shing-yim the sum of $154, being amount spent on injuries sustained as the result of being knocked down by the defendant's motor-car No. 1762.

Plaintiff alleged that defendant had driven his car in a negligent manner and had caused bruises and swelling to the lower half of her back and to her right foot.

Mr. M. A. da Silva, appeared on behalf of the plaintiff while Mr. W. A. Mackinlay represented the defendant.

It was alleged by the plaintiff that shortly after 4 p.m. on December 28 she was proceeding from Happy Valley towards town in a bus. She got off at the first stop in Wanchai Road to go to her son's house. Before she crossed the road, she saw another bus going from west to east and she stopped to wait for it to pass. Whilst she was thus waiting, she alleged, defendant's car brushed past her and knocked her down. The car was proceeding in the same direction as the bus in which she had travelled. After being attended to, she was taken home by defendant in his car. In the course of conversation, defendant admitted negligence and also that he did not sound his horn as he was trying to apply the brakes.

Plaintiff denied that she herself had been negligent in not seeing whether there was any oncoming traffic before crossing the road.

Cross-examined by Mr. Mackinlay, she denied she was walking across the road when the accident occurred. She said she had her back turned to the car because she had already looked and found there was no oncoming traffic.

Mr. Mackinlay put it to her that defendant had never at any time admitted negligence, but she repeated that he did.

Corroborative evidence was given by Miss A. Costa and Miss A. Santos, a daughter of the complainant. The hearing was adjourned until this morning.

RESTLESS DAYS

A great many people are finding it very uncomfortable in the present chaotic age when they give their likes and dislikes full play and allow their political antipathies to dictate their actions. Some few weeks ago, Mr. Winston Churchill touched upon this matter in his usual brilliant way by picturing what must be the worries of such a tender-hearted and conscientious public man as Lord Hugh Cecil. In the latter's view, friendship with Italy is out of the question for many years to come; he has no very friendly feeling towards France; as a devout Churchman, he cannot have any sympathy with Soviet Russia; being an ardent supporter of the League of Nations, he must condemn Japanese aggression against China; and as a stout British individualist he dislikes the Nazi regime. "There is none that doeth good; no, not one," quotes Mr. Churchill. The disconcerting fact is that what is said of Lord Hugh Cecil could be quite as relevantly said of a great number of British people. Mr. Churchill's cause for uneasiness is that most of these nations with which many Britons are out of harmony are bellicose people, well armed, and, save one, all under the rule of dictators. Thus, Mr. Churchill concludes, if these well-prepared nations should reciprocate the feelings of disapproval and come to some understanding among themselves, a first-class international crisis might easily arise. On the whole, he thinks the British people might do well to revise their antipathies and eliminate the weaker ones. Much of the present restlessness can, of course, be traced to differing political concepts, which, in some countries, find their expression in extreme forms of nationalism. Much will depend, so far as the future peace of the world is concerned, on the groupings of nations. At the moment, there appears a definite trend towards the old system of alliances—a system which has obvious dangers, although it operated solely for defensive purposes it might eventually bring some stability to the European situation. Mr. Neville Chamberlain's reference a few days ago to the future of the League system conveys an implication that Britain may in future base her foreign policy either on alliances or on isolation, but he added that, in any event, she must be adequately armed. After to-morrow's Parliamentary debate, we shall have a clearer idea of the lines on which Britain proposes to move.

BACK UP the

have spent immense sums on ground organisation, Imperial Airways has had to make shift with the barest provision of this indispensable equipment. This, in itself, is a severe handicap.

It was this policy of short-sighted economy which retarded the establishment of our air communications with the Cape and Australia.

Clearly the critics of Imperial Airways are barking up the wrong tree, since, as we have seen, for all the short-comings to which they refer the parsimony of successive Governments and not the company is to blame.

And their clamour against the Air Navigation Bill is the more unwarrantable and ridiculous because one of its main objects is to make good the very deficiencies of which they complain.

For the Bill proposes to raise the subsidies payable in any financial year from £1,000,000 to £1,600,000, a step which will enable Imperial Airways to expand and constantly to modernise its fleet—which is now in process of replacement and to increase also the frequency of its services.

This in turn will, as experience has shown, effect substantial reductions in cost per ton-mile, and thereby accelerate progress towards the goal of financial autonomy.

According to the report of a committee appointed by the League of Nations to investigate European air transport, the major European companies show the following proportion of trade revenue to cost:

Imperial Airways	per cent.
Imperial Airways	61
Deutsch Luft Hansa	35.4
Air France	21
Italy	8.7

And while the British company's ratio of subsidy to total receipts is 38 per cent., that of German is 71 per cent., and that of the French 76 per cent.

SAFETY AND COMFORT

THESE figures, together with the exceptional standard of efficiency, safety, regularity, and comfort maintained by Imperial Airways, amply warrant the Government's decision "to continue to utilise Imperial Airways for the development of Empire air routes, including the future North Atlantic service."

And nothing could be more certain than that the proposed alternative—the encouragement of competitive organisations—would, as the Under-Secretary of State for Air has pointed out, be uneconomical and lead to the dissipation both of public and private money.

Formerly Director of Flying Operations at the Air Ministry air transport, in common with other large transport undertakings, should be owned by the State.

BILL JUSTIFIED

A FEW members of other parties oppose the Bill on other and more plausible grounds—namely:

That the Bill empowers the Secretary of State for Air, with Treasury approval, to enter into long-term subsidy agreements for air transport services;

That in practice this amounts to monopoly; and

That they are opposed to monopoly on principle. The particular monopoly in question is, of course, that granted to our great national air transport concern—Imperial Airways; but the name of British Airways is also anathema, for this, the largest of our domestic air transport combines, has recently been given a contract for the carriage of air mails to Scandinavia and a small subsidy.

But "Imperial" is the main target, and no effort is spared to disparage that company, the principal charges being that its fleet is slow by comparison with those of its foreign competitors, that it has been slow in establishing the Imperial air routes, and that it has not attempted to exploit various promising fields, notably South America, where French, German, and American companies have long since been established.

Hence, according to one of the critics, "Before a subsidy is granted (to Imperial Airways) for a further 15 years, the House ought to be assured that the service given by Imperial

Street Entertainers of Old

WITH the passing of Punch and Judy we are made to realise that the street entertainer of twenty-five years ago is now almost non-existent.

Many and versatile were those "stars" who knew no other stage than the highway. Almost with seasonal regularity did each appear in the course of a "circuit" far more comprehensive than could ever have been offered to them by the greatest music hall syndicate extant.

On account of sheer novelty, one of the most popular figures was the one-man band. If it could not be said that he produced a perfect melody, his energies at least earned our admiration and our coppers.

Blowing into a set of reeds adjusted to his lips, he simultaneously manipulated a hurdy-gurdy with one hand, beat on a big drum with the other, while cymbal effects were introduced by a vigorous movement of the foot. Strapped and loaded as he was, few would envy him on those broiling summer days that are almost as non-existent now as the performer.

Another attractive diversion was provided by the dancing bear, a shaggy fellow, who did his best to earn sundry portions of our "jolly pieces," which we threw in lieu of monetary largesse. Not by any stretch of imagination could the ponderous shuffle be likened to any known terpsichorean movement, but our enthusiasm overlooked any such trifle as that.

TUMBLER MUSIC

Came then two individuals with their musical glasses, a "turn" which never failed to gather appreciative audiences. From a couple of dozen tumblers containing varying quantities of water the sweetest refrain was conjured by skilful use of finger tips, moistened in lime water, upon the rims of the glasses. Following the ceremony of passing round the hat the programme culminated with the duet, "Alice, where art thou?" in which the harmony could hardly have been bettered.

A principle somewhat similar was employed in another musical device. In this instance a number of partially-filled bottles were suspended from a framework, two full octaves, including semi-tones, enabling the adept one to hammer out "Stars and Stripes," etc., by means of two despatch spoons. Here, considerable dexterity was necessary in wrist and footwork, yet it appeared to be a simple enough operation when exhibited by an exponent made agile by long and constant practice. The handbell ringer, too, must needs possess equal nimbleness to do justice to the silvery-toned bells not at intervals on his collapsible table. Naturally, "The Bluebells of Scotland" figured in repertoire, the final chord being produced by the ringing of four bells, two in each hand.

The Foot of Leith Walk had little to do with the association with one of the greatest itinerant performers, Malabar.

Skill and good judgment were amply demonstrated in his favourite feat—throwing a metal ball to some height, to be caught in a leather cup strapped to his forehead. Other juggling items featured in Malabar's programme, which was of a standard no less enjoyable than that of the more orthodox professional.

GERMAN BANDS

The German band announced in unmistakable fashion its coming from afar. The phlegmatic Teutons who comprised the combination were ever at pains to be up to date, their virtues in that respect being on a par with their most systematic door-to-door collection. The registration laws, once unknown, now debar the travelling musician from foreign shores from embarking on those "tours" that may not have been lucrative in themselves, but which possibly served a more definite purpose.

Whether have the swarthy sons of Italy gone, without whom our early musical education would have been incomplete? True, the barrel-organ has become a rarity, those that yet exist being "handled" no longer by the over-smiling Antonios—but the factored petio ventriloquist, and intrigued to be told all about ailing humanity by a striking personality whose hair was as long as the words he used.

As if the foregoing artists did not provide variety enough, we were given the thrill of viewing a sword-swallower at close quarters, mystified by the al fresco ventriloquist, and intrigued to be told all about ailing humanity by a striking personality whose hair was as long as the words he used.

H.K. TAIPANS AND CANTON "BLUE NOSE" LAWS

SHANGHAI WRITER'S SATIRE AT "GRUNDY" SOUTH

"I know there are Taipans in some of the foreign hongs in the British Colony close to you who would sooner die of apoplexy in the summer heat than be seen at their desks minus collar and tie, who forbid their juniors to wear 'shorts' in office hours or to discard their coats while at work—no matter how high the mercury and humidity, and consider the foundations of the British Empire (to say nothing of the Peak!) would begin to crumble if they should be seen in their shirt sleeves by a lady typist."

This is how Hongkong figured in an Open Letter—remarkable for its satire—addressed to the City Fathers of Canton by "Julius Siniens" in the People's Tribune.

The Letter is apropos the recent "blue-nose laws" launched by the Bureau of Public Safety in Canton during a campaign against the wearing of feminine apparel alleged to have "sex appeal".

"Your attitude on this 'sex appeal' in matters of women's dress leads me to think that your minds are moulded in a pattern which is centuries out of date, and is decidedly out of place in this era of the Republic," writes "Julius Siniens".

"I wonder if you know that in the year 1700 an Act of Parliament in England provided that 'all women of whatever age, rank, profession, or degree, whether virgin, maid, or widow, that shall from and after such Act impose upon, reduce and betray into matrimony any of His Majesty's subjects by means of scents, paints, cosmetic washes, artificial teeth, false hair, Spanish wool, iron stays, hoops, high-heeled shoes or bolstered hips, shall incur the penalty of the law now in force against witchcraft and like misdemeanours and that marriage upon conviction shall stand null and void."

"It is also true that even in England to-day there are people who are 1700-minded, and like your silly selves think civilisation is in danger."

DOGS ARE MENACE IN HOMES

"DESTROY THEM" SAYS COUNCIL

A STRONG warning that the keeping of dogs as household pets in the same buildings as children constituted a grave danger anywhere in the Far East was voiced by the Shanghai Health Department in its Report published in the last issue of the Journal of Tropical Medicine and Hygiene.

Rabies, the report states, is the most dangerous disease in the Far East, yet it is the hardest in which to whip up public interest so that precautions can be taken.

The Report discloses that the number of cases in animals is on the increase.

"The public must be made to realise that the very highly unsatisfactory state of affairs which exists is their own fault, and that the remedy lies with them," says the Report.

"So long as they are content to have unmuzzled dogs in the city, or to honour the muzzling order more in the breach than in the observance, or again, to take their dogs into the country areas or beaches where they have plenty of opportunity of coming in contact with rabid animals, so long will the community have rabies."

CATS TOO

"It must be remembered also that in the Far East the cat is quite liable to get the disease and then becomes even more of a menace than a dog."

"It cannot be too strongly emphasised that anti-rabies injections are no sovereign remedy in the prevention of the disease as even at the present time it is the experience everywhere that a considerable mortality occurs in persons at risk though they have received the full course of treatment."

"It should never be forgotten that to have animals in the house where there are children is simply asking for trouble."

"If the public would remember these points the department would be saved a great deal of worry, as the fully developed disease in human beings is so appalling as to be beyond description."

"A system for the ruthless destruction of unmuzzled dogs should be instituted at once. The protests of the sentimentalists which would inevitably occur should be looked at in the cold light of reason and logic, i.e., that for the most part of humanity at any rate, it is better that a dog or cat should have its existence terminated, perhaps prematurely, than a human being should die of rabies."

of complete collapse because a few young women on holiday at the seaside parade the promenade in beach costumes which expose more of their shapely limbs and bodies than is usually seen in public.

There are English people who work themselves into a fine frenzy of indignation because some women wear "shorts" when playing tennis, just as they used to go into hysterics at the sight of a woman pulling a cigarette—but they survive that shock, even as you will get over the sight of women in the streets of Canton with arms bare to the shoulder and skirts slashed to the thigh.

"You must not take yourselves too seriously—that is a very common fault in people armed with a little brief authority."

HONGKONG'S MODESTY

I know there are Taipans in some of the foreign hongs in the British Colony close to you who would sooner die of apoplexy in the summer heat than be seen at their desks minus collar and tie, who forbid their juniors to wear "shorts" in office hours or to discard their coats while at work, no matter how high the mercury—and humidity, and consider the foundations of the British Empire (to say nothing of the Peak!) would begin to crumble if they should be seen in their shirt-sleeves by a lady typist.

I could go on quoting similar imbecilities, but I will not. I want to do is to make the generous concession in your favour that Canton is not the only city in the world where silly things are done by people in authority.

For that matter, some of the orders emanating from Canton strike me as being as irrational and senseless as your own edicts. A few weeks ago an "order" was issued that all male employees in Government offices must wear "Kuan Shan" uniforms, and women must appear clad in blouse and skirt—black in autumn and winter, and cream during spring and summer. But why stop there? Why not officially specify further details of male and female wardrobe—approved and prohibited colours of socks and stockings, texture and design of "panties," "seanties" and other underwear, style of shoes—height of heels and geometrical angle of toes? I am all in favour of efficiency, and I quite agree that Chinese long gowns—while they give dignity and charm to certain types of figure—do not conduce to active physical movement. But are Government officials engaged upon their routine duties in Ministries, Departments, and Bureaux, really called upon to indulge in much violent physical exertion? Do they vault over chairs and take running jumps over ladders in their efforts to keep pace with the rush of public work which overwhelms them? Are they in the habit of sprinting like Olympic champions up and down stairs and through long corridors in search of missing "files," and do they stagger about the place with tremendous loads of books in their arms? If not, it seems to me that a man can use his brains and wield a writing-brush just as quickly when clad in a long gown as in a "Kuan Shan" uniform, and a woman can punch a typewriter or add machine just as efficiently when wearing a "mandarin" costume as in a blouse and skirt.

"All this, you will say, is nothing to do with you—and, once you will be very right, just as your policemen were very wrong when they branded a lady whom they did not know was the wife of somebody who is somebody very important. This was very unfortunate. For the over-zealous officers, but a very good thing for your community at large, for the angry lady made such a rumpus about the indignity to which she had been subjected that you hastily called off your police-dogs, denuded your "morality squad," and decided to confine your censorial-sartorial activities to actresses appearing before the footlights."

Henceforth, it seems, ladies in Canton walk about the streets exposing brightly-enamelled toe-nails and as much of the rest of their own individual ideas of propriety (as we used to try to say at school), and it is my impression that the ladies in Canton are quite well able to look after themselves.

Just as the high mud-walls and tall bamboo stockades of olden times have been largely replaced by barbed-wire fences, so are the absurdly over-privileged women of our youth giving place to more sensibly-clad ladies who—acting on the barbed-wire principle—are willing to allow passers-by to use their eyes but not to trespass on private property.

"Any rule, and a very pleasant one, that your policemen will not in future, be called upon to pass an opinion about the 'sex appeal' of women's dress except when the wearer is on the stage, and I hope you are capable of using in this sense your eyes and ears, and making a new effort to keep Canton 'clean'—first, in drafting instructions for stage-censorship, and then in selecting

HOW COLONY WAS DENUDED OF SILVER

STORY TOLD IN TREASURER'S REPORT

During the last six months of last year when the price of silver became so high, that Hongkong silver dollar coins were worth more melted down than as legal tender, the Colony lost $150,661,908 worth of silver.

This huge quantity was exported, chiefly by banks, and sold in the world markets.

It reduced Hongkong's supply of silver to such an acute extent that it almost caused a financial panic.

Fortunately, Government, alive to the situation, stepped in on November 8, and prohibited the export of silver.

It is interesting to note that during the first six months of the year, only $24,166,038 worth of silver was exported.

In his Annual Report on the finances of the Colony, the Colonial Treasurer, Hon. Mr. Edwin Taylor, traces the history of the course of events leading up to the Colony's famous silver shortage.

Following wide fluctuations in exchange, discrepancy between the exchange value of the silver dollar and its bullion value, and the imposition in 1931 of variable duties by the Chinese Government on the export of silver from China, says the Colonial Treasurer's Annual Report, the Hongkong Government—on 9th November, 1935, prohibited the export of silver, and on the 6th December, 1935, a Currency Ordinance was passed calling in silver coin from circulation, and setting up the machinery which controls the exchange value of the Hongkong dollar.

Briefly, this consists of an Exchange Fund, with power to buy and sell foreign exchange, which has taken over the silver formerly held against their issues by the note-issuing banks, in return for certificates of indebtedness against which the Fund may hold silver or foreign exchange.

Exchange fluctuated to an unusual extent throughout the year, not since the calamitous collapse of 1920 has there been so wide a difference between high and low.

During the first half of the year suitable men to carry out your instructions.

"Don't give some addled-pated Jack-in-office the task of deciding whether an actress's dress is 'immodest,' and make yourselves ridiculous again by making a fuss about an exposed shoulder or dimpled knee. Try to understand that women nowadays expect and should have more freedom than they used to be given. There are still cities in China where men and women are segregated in theatres, but even in those antediluvian dumps the authorities will wake up in time."

My advice to you is not to be left behind in the race, and see that Canton becomes famous not for the imbecilities of its City Fathers but for their paternal pride in its progress in all things—even the civic attitude towards "sex appeal." But if, as seems very probable, you feel you really must pass some more regulations—and probably you have an irrefragable look for intensive legislative activity—you had better let the women severely alone and allow them to wear what they like when, where, and how they like, but make it compulsory for all young men in Canton—say between the ages of 16 and 50—to wear dark glasses when they go out in the street, so that they may not be lured like moths to destruction by the dazzling visions of loveliness passing before their eyes. And having passed such a regulation for taking the "kick" out of pulehrude, kindly see that you yourselves ways put on the goggles required by law before you put your noses outside the door.

There can be no doubt that the "management" of the dollar will very seriously affect the business of these Exchange Banks. Interbank operations that have hitherto accounted for, say, seventy per cent. of our immense banking turnover, have come almost to a standstill. Outport orders for covering operations have ceased, and banks consequently are almost idle.

INSTRUCTIONS GIVEN TO OLYMPIC STARS

Set Of Rules Drawn Up To Govern Athletes During Training

Shanghai, June 16. "The eyes of the nation are on you," said John Mo, the head coach of the China Olympic track and field team, yesterday afternoon at the assembly of the 15 representatives who will wear the Chinese colours, at the Derrington Apartment, "and you must behave in words and deeds to show the real sporting spirit of the Chinese athletes. Now that you are selected it does not mean that you can ease off. During the fortnight you are in Shanghai you must try hard to raise the standards of each event."

The 15 track and field athletes who have attracted the attention of the selection committee of the China National Amateur Athletic Federation gathered at the Derrington Apartment yesterday to receive explicit instructions from John Mo.

The selected athletes are: K. C. Fu, L. C. Chia, P. C. Chen, P. S. Wu, S. L. Wong, Y. J. Huang, C. C. Liu, S. K. Tai, L. K. Chang, K. K. Chen, T. L. Wong, C. C. Ling, B. K. Long, J. Koh and Miss S. Lee.

There is still one vacancy for a pole vaulter and either Paul Foo or H. Wong will be chosen. However, a tryout for these two will be held at a later date when Paul has sufficiently recovered from his recent illness.

S. China Set Hot Pace

Against Weak Combination

(By "Veritas")

It must be years since the Chinese Recreation Club have been faced with difficulties in raising tennis teams for the league. But they are confronted with such a problem this summer in regard to their second team in the "A" Division.

Because of this they conceded a walk-over to their senior outfit a week ago, and yesterday, against South China A.A., they had to include a "B" Division pair and a "C" Division player in order to field a complete team.

The outcome, of course, was a stinging defeat by 7½ sets to 1½. Only three of the six players came within the same class as the South China team. Luk Ding-chung and Lau Ma-ching grabbed a set and a half, while Frank Kwok, poorly supported, nearly snatched one set off his own racket.

GREAT RECOVERY

Luk and Lau figured in a great recovery against K. H. Wong and W. H. Ho. The latter were leading 5-2 and 40-30. But Lau made a successful recovery from his own mistakes, and finally lured Wong into smashing three easy set points. With the eighth game saved, the home pair went on to win the ninth on service and break-through again to 30 on Wong's delivery.

The visitors retaliated by winning Luk's service, but they could not clinch the advantage. Ho lost the first two points on his service, but then 30-40, drew up to deuce, but could not secure set point. Further blunders following perfect defensive measures by Lau gave C.R.C. the game and half a set.

S. W. Ling and Lu Tak-lam were disappointing. There was a complete absence of confidence in their work, and they played as though they seriously believed themselves to be out of such a class of tennis. On records they should be able to hold their own in the best of company. There were mistakes galore, but their chief shortcoming was not in errors off the racket but in positioning. Too often were they caught at their feet as a result of hanging about the "per zone" between the service court line and the baseline.

LUI ONE OF THE BEST

K. F. Lui was one of the best performers on view, notably in the first two sets during which he volleyed and smashed with commendable skill and accuracy. He was very businesslike, keeping his mistakes down to the minimum.

K. Wong, South China's youngest and most promising player, punished everything he could reach, but he did not always show discrimination and he had long periods of inaccuracy when the simplest of smashes were put yards out of the court or into the back of the net. He preferred close-quarter volleying and was adept in it.

On the whole the tennis was scarcely up to standard. There was an air of disinterestedness about the C.R.C. players which made them easy targets for the workmanlike South China outfit.

DETAILED SCORES FOLLOW.

S. W. Ling and Lu Tak-lam (Chinese R.C.) lost to K. F. Lui and H. K. Ho 1-6; lost to K. H. Wong and W. H. Ho 1-6; lost to T. K. Lung and F. N. Long 4-6.

Luk Ding-chung and Lau Ma-ching (Chinese R.C.) lost to Lui and Ho 3-6; drew with Wong and Ho 6-6; beat Lung and Wong 6-2.

S. H. Kwok and H. N. Chai (Chinese R.C.) lost to Lui and Ho 2-6; lost to Wong and Ho 4-6; lost to Lung and Wong 4-6.

"D" DIVISION

Police Beat Kowloon Cricket Club

An abandoned "D" Division match between Police Recreation Club and K.C.C. was played off at Happy Valley yesterday, Police winning by six sets to three.

Police fielded a strong side including Carruthers and Chris Pile. Nevertheless this combination yielded a set to A. E. Perry and H. W. Crabbe, who also won a second set from B. G. Baker and A. E. Carey.

G. Carruthers and C. Pile (Police) beat K. Brock and C. Blum 6-4; lost to A. E. Perry and H. W. Crabbe 3-6; beat A. Spary and T. Ferguson 7-5.

A. R. S. Major and D. Smith (Police) beat Brock and Blum 6-3;

DOROTHY ROUND IN MERCILESS MOOD

Fine Driving Annihilates Seniorita Lizana

A full gallery, despite the rarity and inconvenience of a Friday final, witnessed at Surliton a great demonstration of women's lawn tennis at its best by Miss D. E. Round, who utterly outclassed Seniorita A. Lizana, and thus became for the first time the grass court champion of Surrey.

The score of 6-2, 6-3 inadequate to suggest Miss Round's great superiority, the games scored against her representing either occasional errors due to the taking of liberties (warrantable in the circumstances) or sheer pluck and running ability on the part of the Chilean girl. Seniorita Lizana was, indeed, made to appear almost stricken. Her favourite drop shot, rarely attempted for lack of opportunity, was quite unreliable as an answer to Miss Round's storming drives; control was so far beyond the Chilean girl's power that the ball borrowed enough pace to land in midcourt, where it was promptly slaughtered.

Seniorita Lizana's inches are not many, but one had the feeling that "Miss Round" fairly towered over her. This impression was due to the fact that the former Wimbledon champion, taking the ball just before it reached the top of the bound, was almost invariably in such a stance at the moment of striking that she could sweep the ball down towards its target near the lines. There was majesty in her force; superb technique in all her movements, and, best of all, that confidence which has at times eluded her of late.

A FLYING START

Miss Round did not need any time to play herself in; during the first four games Seniorita Lizana collected six points, which included one from a double fault and one from a false bound on a service. During this phase a characteristic coup of Miss Round's consisted of two sweeping drives, deep to the forehand corner, followed by a delicate drop volley. Seniorita Lizana managed to get two of the next three games, and after losing that set held her only lead of the match at 1-0 in the second set. After that she was always an oddity with fate and often despairingly watching puffs of chalk beyond her reach. Gameness and good passes across and down the line helped her to 2-4, and after losing the next game to love, she returned the compliment for 5-3, but she could not make any further impression, losing the tenth game from 40-love.

PAMBARTON CHAMPION

Title Instead Of Going To School

Southport (Lancs), May 24. MISS PAM BARTON, nineteen-year-old London girl, is the British women's golf champion to-day because her parents changed their plans about sending her to a Paris finishing school.

She won the title here by beating England's youngest magistrate, Miss Bridget Newell, aged twenty-four, of Derbyshire, 7 and 5 in the thirty-six hole final.

Pam was runner-up in 1934 and again last year. Her comment to her parents to-day was, "It's great, I feel just like champagne."

The reason she did not go to Paris in 1934 was that her parents thought, as the weather was hot, it would be better to postpone the journey and let her play in the championship at Northcote.

She played, reached the final, had the education of world travel as a British golfer representative.

Champion Pam Barton May Be Wethered Of The Future

(By LEO MUNRO)

Southport, May 24. Third time paid for all. Nineteen-year-old Miss Pam Barton, of Royal Mid-Surrey, won the British women's golf championship here to-day when she beat Miss Bridget Newell, of Derbyshire, by the crushing margin of seven up and five to play in the thirty-six holes final.

A great triumph. Few younger players have won the title, though Miss May Hezlet did so at the age of seventeen. Smiling, freckled, Auburn-haired Miss Pam was the runner-up in 1934 and again last year. Now she is champion at the third successive attempt.

Her record shows an amazingly rapid rise to fame. A beginner at the age of twelve, she played county golf for Surrey two years later. She is British Curtis Cup golfer, and has played international golf in Australia, New Zealand, America and Canada.

Powerful, determined, and a calm temperament, she may be the Joyce Wethered of the future. She played impressive golf to beat twenty-four-year-old Miss Newell, Matlock magistrate, here to-day. Her long and mainly steady driving in a roaring wind helped to wear down Miss Newell. Her iron shots carried on the good work, and what the driving began was finished by the deadliness of her putting.

Miss Newell began well, but broke down under the strain to wayward steering of shots. She was the older of the finalists, but the younger had the greater experience, and experience told.

Miss Newell was always in arrears after her opponent became one up at the 7th hole this morning. A brave pursuer, but one whose hopes were doomed to fail.

Advantage to Miss Barton, who thought, before the first round had begun. Run of the play justified the pro-Barton idea. Here was the greater power. She maintained the effective line at the long game.

Still Miss Newell put up a splendid fight for sixteen holes in the first round. But initiative was with Miss Barton. She took the lead at the third hole and, though twice brought back to all-square, was not headed throughout the day.

There was a great half in four at the 16th. Miss Barton holding a putt of five yards. Miss Newell responding from three yards, amid cheers from the crowd on the towering sandhills beside the green.

But the fight swung away from Miss Newell. Pulled second shots cost her the last two holes, and she finished the round three down.

The fight, as such, ended early in the afternoon. Miss Barton won the first hole, and lost the next two—the second partly because the over-eagerness of an amateur photographer ruffled her as she was about to play a bunker shot.

But, beginning at the fourth hole, the game became processional. The strain told on Miss Newell. The cold wind, too, though now she was wearing a yellow jersey over the dark blue. She lost her putting touch.

So Miss Barton, out in 41 against 45, turned six up.

Miss Newell fought on bravely. But the end came at the thirteenth. Miss Newell, short with pitch and run, Miss Barton dead for a winning four and the championship.

THE GOLD VASE. Outsider Wins At Twenty To One. The result of the Gold Vase, run over a distance of two miles was: Horse, 20 to 1. Fearless Fox, 2 to 1. Belafiel, 100 to 1. Seventeen ran.

The race was won by one and a half lengths with two lengths between second and third.—Reuter.

YESTERDAY'S LAWN BOWLS

PAIRS & SINGLES CHAMPIONSHIPS

Only a curtailed programme of matches was played in the Lawn Bowls Championships yesterday, the most interesting game being that on the Kowloon Cricket Club Green where A. W. Grimmitt and C. Strange eliminated L. J. Silva and H. A. Alves by 20-10.

The match was close throughout and quite a high standard of bowls was shown by all players. The Civil Service C.C. pair were behind at 5-2 on the sixth head but took the lead by 8-5 by scoring a four on the eighth. They then led 14-8 and 14-12 while the Portuguese couple went ahead at 15-14 on the 16th head and were 17-14 on the eighteenth.

Strange and Grimmitt scored a four on the 19th head and a two on the 20th and registered a two on the 21st to win by a narrow margin.

On the Club de Recreio green S. Bright and J. E. Henson beat R. O. Read and G. H. Sheriff fairly comfortably by 24-16 after leading practically throughout the match. The losers led 10-9 on the 11th head but were outplayed for the next eight heads during which they failed to score. A six on the 17th made the score 22-10. The losers registered a five on the 19th head but never looked like catching up.

On the Craigcraigher Cricket Club green, J. V. Ramsay and J. McKelvie inflicted a crushing defeat on J. Hosen and A. O. Madar in the Pairs championship by 27 shots to seven.

The losers did not seem to find the green at all to their liking and played poor bowls. Hosen showed up better than Madar, who was inclined to be either too short or too heavy.

Ramsay played well as a lead for the winners, frequently trailing the Jack. McKelvie also played good bowls, his drawing being exceptionally good. The winners scored on 15 heads, scoring seven twos and two threes, while the losers only scored on six heads.

OPEN SINGLES

Playing in the Open Singles championship on the Police Recreation Club green yesterday, D. Kurnjahn defeated A. M. Calman by 21 shots to 12 on the 20th head.

The winner led throughout, scoring on eleven heads against his opponent's nine. Kurnjahn scored a four on the seventh head, and also three threes; while Calman's best were in twos and singles.

MATCHES POSTPONED

The Open Pairs match between R. Duncan and K. G. Hamilton, arranged for the Kowloon Dock Green yesterday, was postponed until to-day.

Owing to the indisposition of L. A. Gutierrez the match on the Kowloon B. G. C. where Gutierrez and A. A. dos Remedios were to have met J. E. Noronha and F. X. M. da Silva, was postponed.

Football Transfers

R. Murphy, the Hitchin Town inside-right, has signed for Luton Town. Swansea have signed Ron Williams, Chester's Welsh international centre-forward, who formerly played for Swansea; E. Crowe, goalkeeper, from West Bromwich, and C. Greens, a Wolverhampton utility man.

George Nicholson, the Bolton Wanderers half-back, has joined Cardiff City.

W. J. Scott, the Stockport full-back, has been signed by Cardiff. He gained three Irish League "caps" and joined Stockport from Darlington.

David Mangnall, the West Ham centre-forward, has been transferred to Millwall.

Armstrong, a 22-year-old centre-half who has played for Aston Villa Colts and Swindon, has been signed by Gillingham.

EVERY GOLFER CAN IMPROVE HIS GAME

It is my contention that every golfer can improve his game if he has a little more time to spend with his clubs.

complexion of things. Up to that time Bowes had proved well high unplayable and in spite of Derby's total of 233 succeeded in returning an analysis of 5 for 60. Townsend contributed a masterly 101 while Worthington helped with a fine knock for 80.

Against Mitchell, Yorkshire could do little right and were sent back for 112, Mitchell taking 6 for 60. Following on Yorkshire hit up 102 for the loss of one wicket before the match ended.

ASHDOWN STILL SCORING

Another glorious century by Bill Ashdown and effective bowling by "Tich" Freeman gave Kent a comfortable victory by six wickets against Somerset at Tonbridge.

Kent's response to Somerset's first innings of 169 (Freeman 6 for 60) was 248 for 8 declared (Ashdown 132). Somerset fairly collapsed in their second innings, being dismissed for 123 and Kent hit off the required 47 for the loss of four wickets.

Clever all-round performances by Sam Lee, Warwickshire and Brown of the Free Foresters were features. Sam Lee took five Sussex wickets for 59 and scored 104 not out, playing an important part in Warwick's defeat of Sussex by five wickets.

Brown, appearing for Free Foresters against Cambridge took 7 for 88, then went on to score 81.

TEST TRIAL RUINED

The Test trial—North v. South—was spoiled by rain. M. J. Turnbull of Glamorgan carried off chief individual batting honours sitting up 106 for the South, while Hardstaff of North contributed 89 not out for the North. W. V. Robins (Middlesex) bowled well for the South to take 33 for the North's 321.

Brilliant bowling by Sinsfield played a notable part in Gloucester's success against Glamorgan by 97 runs. In the first innings he took 5 for 68 and in the second 7 for 58. So completely

A friend recently complained to me that he took 123 strokes to play a round of 18 holes.

This is how I took ten strokes off his game in ten days, and this is how every other golfer can do the same. I asked him to describe all the shots he made in the round, classifying them into putts, chips, trouble shots, irons and drives.

He had several four-putt greens, and often took two shots to get out of traps.

I found he had wasted 23 shots on or just off the greens and about 13 more when he was in trouble. His short game and recovery work were largely responsible for his big score. He told me when he came off the course that he was in the rough nine times off the tee. As there are four short holes, he missed nine drives out of 14, and from any position he was in, he should not have gone more than one shot above par on each hole.

SHOTS ON PAPER

If a player wants to better his score, he should make a survey of his shots to discover where his greatest failings are.

This survey should be made on paper, otherwise the player might be more interested in, say—driving and would not be honest with himself.

Going back to my friend, I told him that if he would come to the course half an hour earlier on the three days a week that he played, and practise his putting and on other days play some shots out of a sand trap, he would cut his errors in these departments of his game by at least 50 per cent, in just a few of these little practical sessions.

A couple of afternoons a week after office hours spent with the club professional would speed his progress up a great deal.

LOUIS PASTEUR"

FICTIONISED BY

Joseph Jefferson O'Neill

CHAPTER I

"You have heard the testimony presented before this court. It has been sworn that you entered the home of Dr. Armand Frederic, whom you never had even seen before, and killed him with two shots from your pistol. What have you to say, prisoner at the bar?"

The audience in the little Magistrate's court in the Paris of 1860 leaned forward eagerly to catch the reply of the middle-class tradesman who stood between two gendarmes facing the silk-robed judge.

"It was not murder. It was but justice!" exclaimed the defendant. "Dr. Frederic wronged me. He killed my wife!"

"There has been no such showing," the Magistrate said. "How did the doctor kill your wife?"

"He killed her through his carelessness—his dirty hands, his dirty instruments. She died of childbed fever. He—"

The men and women in the benches looked at each other in astonishment. Childbed fever? What did the prisoner mean by his accusation? Every one knew that about three out of every ten prospective mothers in Paris died from that affliction. Was it not part of the inscrutable ways of Providence? The Magistrate voiced the opinion of all when he said, protestingly:

"But you can't blame a physician for that."

"Can't you?" shouted the defendant. "Here—read this."

He tossed to the Judge's desk a pamphlet whose first page read:

"DOCTORS! SURGEONS

Wash your hands—

Boil your instruments—

Members cure Disease.

Louis Pasteur."

The Magistrate looked casually through the booklet for a moment, then threw it aside.

"This prisoner is mad," he said.

"Mad? That, indeed, seemed to be a widespread belief as to the condition, also, of Louis Pasteur, author of this pamphlet and of many other radical utterances of the day. The physicians of Paris, almost to a man, ridiculed his theories, paid no attention to his advice. Seriously, many sought his banishment from the city."

"Why, he isn't even a doctor, Sir?"

"He is a mere chemist," Dr. Charbonnet, court physician, was discussing Pasteur with Napoleon III, Emperor of France. "You may recall that a few years ago he was the cause of a slight controversy on the subject of sour wine."

"Ah, yes, I recall," the Emperor interrupted. "He claimed to have found little animals in it—infinitesimal beings—but are there such creatures? Do they really exist?"

"Your Majesty," Charbonnet replied, "microscopic organisms have long been observed. They spring into being of their own accord wherever there is a putrid matter of fermentation. They are the RESULT of disease, not the CAUSE."

"By heating wine to certain temperatures, Monsieur Pasteur was able to destroy them. I presume he now plans to cure blood poisoning in the same manner—by boiling our blood; that is not unlikely, Sir, I assure you."

"But I won't have it, Charbonnet!"

Napoleon pounded his fist upon a table. "We're not living in the Middle Ages. This is France—Paris—the Nineteenth Century!"

"At least," a quiet voice interjected, "this Monsieur Pasteur should be allowed to defend himself."

Napoleon's slender, lovely Empress was speaking.

The gray-bearded physician spread his hands outward in a gesture of helpless resignation, and shrugged his shoulders. Why, indeed, had more than twenty thousand women perished in the hospitals of Paris during the year?

Napoleon took the arm of his Empress and they moved toward their imperial boudoir.

Louis Pasteur bent over the shoulder of his chief assistant, Emile Roux, in his laboratory in the basement of his home in Rue d'Ulm. He was in his added thirties, a man of quick, agile movements.

Pasteur looked into the microscope. "The fifty-eighth test slide, and yet we have not definitely isolated the germ of childbed fever," he said wearily. "But we'll keep it up, Roux. Remember our aim: find the microbe that kills the microbe!"

There was a knock at the laboratory door. Marie, Pasteur's wife, entered in high excitement. She carried an envelope bearing the royal arms of the Emperor of France.

"An invitation—a command, indeed, for the scientist to attend a reception that night at the Palace."

"The Emperor?" exclaimed Pasteur. "Marie! If I can only convince his Majesty!"

But that was not to be. So intense was the chemist in his opening explanations of his microbe theory to Napoleon that the Emperor, well-balanced though he was, believed there might be a trace of madness about the man, as Dr. Charbonnet had more than once suggested.

"Sir, the hospitals of Paris are pest houses!" Pasteur insisted. "There is scarcely a doctor in the city who is not carrying death on his hands and instruments."

And when Charbonnet said sarcastically, "Because of microbes, Monsieur? Because of your private menagerie of invisible beasts?" the chemist was quick with a hot retort.

A chorus of laughter from the surrounding courtiers and ladies-in-waiting drove away what remained of Pasteur's patience. He pointed his finger at Charbonnet.

"Listen! On my way here to-night, I learned that a young woman—wife of a servant in this Court—died a victim of your bigotry. And that isn't the end. The woman who attended her will carry the infection to your next and more illustrious patient—the Countess Gabrielle de Villefort!"

Charbonnet, livid with rage, glared at Pasteur. "You hear, Sir?" he asked the Emperor. "He accuses me of murder—I who brought into the world our Emperor's son, the future Emperor of France."

"Stop! I forbid any more," commanded Napoleon. "You should know better, Pasteur! The Countess Gabrielle, whom you name, is her Majesty's sister."

"Pasteur, in the preservation of wine and beer you have been of service to France. We appreciate that. In the future, confine yourself to that."

work. If you have any more theories to offer you will, before publishing them, present them in writing to the Academy of Medicine, which is the proper guardian of our national health."

Pasteur choked back further words, and stood bowed.

"But, Sir, what of the pamphlet this fellow has already written and distributed?" The speaker was Dr. Roussignol, a confere of Charbonnet and one of the leaders of the Academy.

"For that, Monsieur Pasteur, you will publish an immediate retraction or suffer my displeasure."

Pasteur turned away.

When he reached home he dropped into a chair and covered his face with his hands.

"Pack everything we own, Marie," he told his wife. "We're leaving Paris to-morrow—forever."

300 Grass Widows In An Army Camp

Catterick (Yorks), June 1. CATTERICK CAMP is the headquarters of an army of grass widows. For months more than 300 wives have been without their husbands.

Now they fear the men on service with the Fifth Division in the East will not return this summer. Scores of women with no families, or small ones, have "gone home to mother."

The grass widows are the wives of men of the 1st East Lancashire Regiment, 1st (King's Own) Scottish Borderers, 2nd Gloucesters, 2nd Lincolns, 2nd South Wales Borderers, 2nd Cheshires and 20th Brigade Royal Artillery.

"THIRD SEPARATION"

A wife in the East Lancs lines said:

"This is our third separation in four years. We were at home while the regiment was fourteen months in Shanghai. Then it went to the Saar for ten weeks. Now it has been away four months, and there is little prospect of its returning. In eleven years of married life I have spent only four with my husband."

Another woman said: "To most of us it means considerable financial sacrifice. Our men can-

No Duke Of Cornwall

EFFECT OF NEW RULING

After nearly 100 years—95 to be precise—there is no Duke of Cornwall. This is the effect of a ruling given under the authority of the secretary of the Duchy of Cornwall recently, and will correct a misconception held even in Court circles, about the title.

It was contended that the title became merged in the Crown on the accession of the present King, who was the third successive holder since the birth of King Edward VII.

Actually the title has been dormant more than once since it was created in 1337, but the last lapse was in the Hanoverian dynasty and immediately before the birth of King Edward VII, in 1841.

It is officially stated that his Majesty, while owner of the Duchy of Cornwall, is not the Duke of Cornwall. The title of Duke of Cornwall is held exclusively by the eldest surviving son of the Sovereign, who inherits it at birth.

PLANE CRASHES INTO GARDEN

PILOT HAS LUCKY ESCAPE

An aeroplane piloted by Mr. Peter Nicholas, son of Admiral Nicholas, of Lee-on-Solent, crashed into Fairfield Nursery, Wych Lane, Gosport, last month.

The machine was completely wrecked, and portions of it were scattered over a considerable area but the pilot escaped. Three gardeners who were planting chrysanthemums had narrow escapes. So near was one of them, George Mason, that the tail of the plane whirled off, the last four plants he had put in.

One wing of the plane hit a strawberry frame. After travelling about 50 yards the machine turned completely over. The engine was hung some distance away from the wreckage.

The pilot, badly shaken, managed to crawl out of the wreckage, and was later taken to hospital with a cut face.

He has gone away to escape the thousands of letters of advice which are pouring in on him from people who would like to earn the reward.

The millionaire is Rai Bahadur Ramdas Bajoria.

Bajoria made his offer in March. In the middle of April he announced that he had had twenty minutes' sleep—the first in twenty-seven months.

He has been receiving an average of 5,000 messages a week ever since the offer was made.

The favourite remedy suggested in the shoal of letters is hot milk and onions.

Bible reading, chopping wood, counting sheep and flying are alternatives.

A cable from an old American woman advises him to eat lettuce.

Bajoria's health has been undermined by drugs taken to induce sleep.
